ONLY CALM, SELF-MOTIVATION THROUGH LOGICAL COGNITION PROVIDES A FIRM FOUNDATION FOR CHANGE

By Vivienne Legg

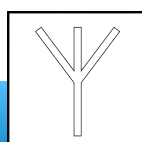

FIGU members and friends and all those who see it's teaching as the real teaching of life and the teaching of the truth, can feel overwhelmed by the situation we find ourselves in. How can we hope to tackle the multitude of problems on this Earth which seem to grow faster than we can start to solve them, and how will it go when we no longer have our treasured teacher among us?

Creation Energy Teaching

It's an extraordinary thing to contemplate what the work of FIGU means on planet Earth. If we accept the value of the explanations provided by the Plejaren and Billy, as is only logical and correct as members and others who take part in the work, our work is the start of a profound change in the outlook of the Earth human being which will eventually spread right across the globe and displace religious and other forms of belief. The organisation FIGU is set up to facilitate the education in the Creation-energy teaching of all willing Earth human beings and specifically those who will lead the world in the future.

Unlike with innumerable religious stories about worldly transformations, this necessitates rational, logical and thorough self-responsibility. For this to happen there can be no elevated figure who will save us or motivate us through charismatic speeches, raising everyone up with inspiring, rousing performances, because logically change has to happen through our own recognition of the need and, therefore, our own effort of self-motivation. Only that provides a lasting, firm foundation.

There are so many things at all levels that we need to change. It's changing our own personalities, how we deal with others around us, coping in the current world of strife, getting a handle on that Creation-energy teaching, learning what actual, true democracy looks like, creating a whole new world of logical and consistent thoughts that don't allow us to nurture some good things while neglecting or destroying other things. No step can be skipped with the change that has to come about on this planet. Absolutely everything at all levels has to be dealt with by Earth humankind, although it cannot happen all at once.

It's not just the world of problems ahead of us that can be very daunting. Also the mass of teaching we are provided with can be quite daunting. For me, sometimes a brief overview of what is required is a helpful thing. For a quick look at what that human being who is working for positive change must eventually become, I like to refer to some of Billy's 'The Seven Main Factors in the Human Life'. (FIGU-Landesgruppe Australia) It shows what the result will be when we apply our knowledge, acquired through experience and cognitions, to the development of our personalities. It is beneficial not just to read them, but to imagine ourselves already being the positives listed there.

The seven main virtues of the human being are listed as moderateness, steadfastness, industriousness, honesty, discretion, carefulness and benevolence. Meanwhile, modesty, anti-materialism, perseverance, patience, peace, universal love as well as understanding, are the seven foundations of being a human being. Add to this, strength, rationality, intellect, self-discipline, self-control, self-achievement and fearlessness, the seven powers of the human being. All this combats our seven main errors, being carelessness, obstinacy, fear (timorousness), submissiveness, presumptuousness, indolence and selfishness. The considerable work on ourselves naturally must include the care of our psyche which seems to be encapsulated by the seven mightes of the formation of the psyche which are love, music/singing, poetry, nature, satisfaction, light and peace.

Billy writes in his introduction to the book, Goblet of the Truth, (FIGU-Landesgruppe Australia) that we need 'an iron fist' to guide us, by which he means an adherence to ironclad creational law, because only a consistent adherence to teaching which is firmly based in reality will ever serve us.

"Therefore, you need an iron fist to guide you, and you can find this in the 'Goblet of the Truth', in the 'teaching of the prophets' and therefore also in the 'spiritual teaching'

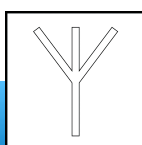

(Creation-energy teaching) which is the ‹teaching of the truth›, the ‹teaching of the spirit› (Creation-energy teaching), the ‹teaching of the life› as has been given over billions of years, brought forth by Nokodemion, carried to Earth from a far-off galaxy and taught by seven prophet personalities from his line of the spirit-form.” (p.LXXIII)

Of course, it doesn't mean fanaticism, which is an excessive enthusiasm and uncritical devotion to something, so, in other words, a lack of respect for the real truth. Attentiveness to reality does not allow an exaggerated or uncritical view.

Although we have an outline of the progress that is expected on planet Earth, provided by the Plejaren, and a timeframe, and a world of teaching, we – Earth humankind – will have to make the effort ourselves to conceive of how a functional world looks – that is, a world where there is no war, no overpopulation, no Gewalt, sustainable energy production, harmony, family and community structures based on love and logic, and so on – and then, bit by bit, make it happen. By drawing a picture in our mind's eye we can then work everything out step by step and breathe life into it. This applies not only to the world but to our own development. In doing so, not only have we created more steps on the path to success but we will have become necessarily stronger as a result. There is no point in fearing the difficulties that will inevitably come because, as Billy explains in his article about striving, in his book, The Way to Live, there can be no success without negative aspects being involved. Then, eventually, as secretary and Core Group member, Bernadette Brand, explains in her article, 'The Leadership role of the Core Group of 49': (FIGU-Landesgruppe Australia)

“Ultimately, in the course of the coming centuries, through the long-term work of FIGU, the basis will be laid for a fundamental change in the thinking of the human beings of the future, who will be instructed in the spiritual (Creation-energy) teaching by the FIGU members, whereby a peaceful and stable future, worthy of humanity, is guaranteed.”

The difficulties we have now and which are to come are themselves an essential part of our development. And if we learn to identify with our creational selves and not just get trapped in materialistic thinking, there is always reason to be joyous, refreshed, successful and strong.

12 YEARS OF STUDY

By Andre Elean

This is a piece I wrote in 2022, with some adjustments. It is called '12 years of study', which I wrote as a summative reflection on 12 years of learnings and experiences studying the Creation-energy as instructed by Billy Eduard Albert Meier.

It remains a deeply personal reflection of my thoughts and feelings at that point in time, and I thought to include it in this month's bulletin as a personal testament to what I have learnt, felt and experienced as a result of studying this teaching.

Of course, these feelings, sentiments, experiences and understandings didn't come at the drop of a hat, but only after years of intense thinking about these things throughout my childhood and then again with even greater intensity after finding this teaching.

Over the years I found self-reflection to be my refuge from the material world, and I spent many hours pondering and meditating over many interests and questions across topics such as: astronomy, natural-science, history and philosophy to name a few.

One of the topics that I always seemed to come back to was the life itself. I dared to think and draw closer to its meaning, and I longed to know what was 'real' in life.

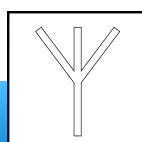

Being Happy

Sometimes, in the deepest moments of self-reflection I would suddenly find myself enraptured by beauty, love, peace and joy, to which I could only helplessly surrender and cry tears of happiness and feel connected to everything and everyone. It was during these pivotal moments that my perspective on life would change, and my feelings for others would deepen and find new meaning. And so, after a handful of these experiences collected over the years, I began to learn what true love is; and my love for my fellow human beings slowly began to blossom and bear fruit. I could stare at the stars, or at anything in nature, and find the creational eye staring back at me, embracing me and weaving everything into a tapestry of love, and for that, I am unendingly grateful to be alive and to share a part with everything and everyone in this wonderful and joyous existence.

Of course, and as with everything, these understandings are in no way absolute, or fully developed; but likely, as Billy would say: 'still in baby's shoes'.

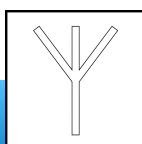

And while it is true that words rarely do justice to experiences, feelings and sensations that overcome the whole body and mind, this was my meagre attempt in 2022 to try and express my awe for what this tremendous teaching has done for my life, and with it, I hope that I can inspire others to journey deeper into the recesses of their consciousness and become more than what they are today; to grow deeper in love, peace, wisdom and freedom, and to find these values in their endlessness, so that they can bring them out from their depths and share them freely and joyfully with the whole of humanity.

“Love, therefore, is the absolute wise comprehension, understanding, cognition, knowledge, ability, mastering and the logic and certainty, as well as the feelings and feeling, and the absolute perception of one’s own co-life in the life of the ones next to us and in all else that exists, as a factor of the togetherness, in original form, with all existing life in all entire universal forms and beyond, in the absolute wisdom of this: that ones’ own existence is also a part-existence of any other existing life-form, which is however, just as exactly a fragment of one’s own existence, and that altogether the entire universal life-forms, of every kind and form, only exist because it truly is so that everything and anything is bound together in love and forms one entire universal oneness.” - Law of Love p. 14

« Liebe also ist das absolute weisheitliche Erfassen, Verstehen, die Erkenntnis, das Wissen, Können, Beherrschen und die Logik und Sicherheit sowie das Gefühl und Erfühlen und absolute Empfinden des eigenen Mitlebens im Nächsten und in allem anderen Existierenden, als Faktor der Gemeinsamkeit in ureignener Form mit allem existenten Leben in allen gesamtuniversellen Formen und darüber hinaus, in der absoluten Weisheit dessen, dass die eigenen Existenz auch eine Teilexistenz jeglicher anderen existierenden Lebensform ist, dass jene aber genauso ein Teilstück der eigenen Existenz ist, und dass sämtliche gesamtuniversellen Lebensformen jeglicher Art und Form nur darum existent sind, weil dem wahrheitlich so ist; dass alles und jedes miteinander in Liebe verbunden ist und eine gesamtuniverselle Einheit bildet. » - Gesetz der Liebe S. 14

So here’s the article I wrote in 2022:

"In my 12 years studying the Creation-energy teaching, my respect and veneration for all life in its entirety as well as for our individual connection to the endlessness has become my reality. I have developed a confidence, authority and control over my thoughts and my life like I have never experienced before. I feel wisdom, love, peace, freedom and harmony coursing and swelling through my consciousness. I see, hear, feel, live and understand the Cosmic Symphony that forms Nature and our Universe like a perfect clockwork and chorus behind all of life's workings. I recognise the infinite in my finite life, and I have felt the endlessness of time make its presence known in me and awaken me. I am not afraid of death nor of other human beings, and I remind myself to show love and kindness and, above all, patience to others each day. My life has become a joy despite its many hardships. I have felt the push and pull by the creational in me towards progress, growth and prosperity at every turn and corner of my life. Consequently, I stand and live for peace, and for the empowerment and independence of all humankind through wisdom. I have learnt to tread water over the depths of oceans, and I realise what the next life will bring. I have accepted my inevitable passing, and I feel familiar with my successors in the next life because of the work I invest in myself today.

My life's purpose has still not changed, however, it has continued to grow and gather a profound weight and conviction as time has passed, and I realise my place in it all, in this moment in time, and in this existence. I feel as though I am an agent of change, a visionary, and a thinker of the times. I strive to be a bringer of peace, a protector of life, and a representative of wisdom, and a representative of this universal teaching, "the teaching of truth, the teaching of the Creation-energy and the teaching of life". I strive to return all things to purity as is my life's purpose, and recognise this echo that appears to be from former times. I have made it my life's purpose to do what I can to help restore the cosmic harmony to Earth's humankind, perceivable in all nature, and in all life, in the entire universe; noticeable only to those who dare to look. I endeavour to grow wise and to learn until death, so that I may share this understanding in order to live and help live, as is our responsibility and duty as human beings. It is through logic, reason, rationality, love, wisdom, peace and freedom that I have realised this understanding and committed myself to make it effective. I now bring each lesson into practice in order to become an instrument of the cosmic symphony (the creational within me) and though nothing will ever be perfect, but only ever relatively developed; I strive for the betterment of all life in every day, and try to do what I can to spread joy, love, peace, wisdom and freedom to make life more welcoming, hospitable and embracing for all.

As a result of our collective efforts, I see that one day very soon humankind on Earth will no longer be divided; instead united by peace, wisdom, love, freedom and harmony, and that they too will understand the tremendous cosmic might of these values. They will recognise the long-standing truth of the wonder of this indescribably beautiful experience; and all the discord, strife, division and indifference will be dissolved, silenced and lose all meaning, when the true peace and wisdom and the prevailing understanding guide humankind throughout the cosmos.

Long after we are gone, the cosmic family of humankind will be an indescribable beauty, a rose kissed by the golden noon's light, graced by evening stars upon the mountain tops and bring joy to all those who look upon it against the seemingly insurmountable odds. For life knows no other way but forwards, and life always finds its way; succeeds and flourishes forever ferociously and brilliantly, as the law of the evolution commands.

Peace, Love Freedom and Wisdom be on Earth, and among all beings."

USING SOCIAL MEDIA – POSTING THOUGHTS AND PASSING JUDGEMENT

By Vibka Wallder

Social media are widely used and can be very distracting and time consuming. They also can be tricky to negotiate at times. If an inappropriate or impulsive comment is made during a personal gathering with family or friends, it can easily be disputed, dispelled or corrected, and the person saying the wrong thing can quickly apologise and smooth it over. However, if the same thought is written down and deliberately or accidentally shared in a group on social media or in an email, then it can have quite a different impact, because once the send button has been pressed, the thought cannot be taken back or easily modified or rectified and there is no control over when or how that comment is received and interpreted.

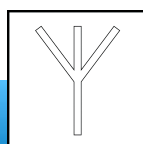

As we have learned from the Creation-energy teaching, one should always be in control of one's thoughts and not share anything that is hurtful or inappropriate, however, it is even more important whilst using social media, because a personal thought can reach a wide audience at different times, and to follow it up with an explanation and apology can be tricky and may not always reach everyone involved.

Connectedness

Recently a condemning thought was shared in a messenger group, which caused a bit of a stir. It reminded me of an article by Billy with the title, 'Condemn not...' (Richte nicht...), from the book, 'For Contemplation' (Zur Besinnung). In this article Billy explains how we read something in the newspaper, hear something on the radio or watch something on TV and even though we don't know those people or their circumstances, in our mind we often condemn them. With friends, acquaintances, loved ones, family, etc., we do the same without feeling guilty about it.

"However, by acting as a judge over the ones next to you, your fellow human beings, you elevate yourself above the Creation, because it, as universal consciousness and universally highest energy and might, never dares to condemn, neither over any human being, nor over any other life form.”

«Doch indem du dich als Richter über deine Nächsten, deine Mitmenschen, aufspielst, erhebst du dich selbst über die Schöpfung, denn sie als Universalbewusstsein und universell höchste Energie und Macht erdreistet sich niemals zu richten, weder über irgendeinen Menschen noch sonst über eine Lebensform.» (Zur Besinnung, page 82)

Therefore, if we condemn others in any shape or form, we elevate ourselves above our fellow human beings instead of seeing them for what they really are, namely fellow human beings with similar wishes, desires, flaws, etc., that we have too. Billy goes on to explain that we are not entitled to condemn because we are as erroneous and as flawed as others and are not better or less than anyone else.

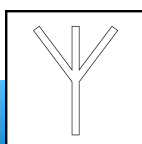

“A quick assessment is always a prejudice, and that, in turn, is a condemnation.” («Ein schnelles Urteil ist immer ein Vorurteil, und das wiederum ist eine Verurteilung.»; page 82)

It is typical human behaviour to quickly assess another person in our thoughts, and sometimes even say it. This is not in the sense of the creational principles, because Creation does not judge or condemn, it only provides the laws and recommendations according to which we can live a righteous, loving, harmonious, peaceful and free life, if we choose to follow them.

“Likewise, you ought to act as a human being, behave as such and fulfil the dignity of being human in the real and true sense, exercise responsibility as a human being and not seek recognition, rather strive for the good that is inherent in you as well as in every other human being.”

Therefore, if we want to become human in the real and true sense, we must not elevate ourselves above Creation by condemning others either in our thoughts or words, especially not when they are written down, because words can be very hurtful and cause discord and unpeace instead of love, harmony, peace, freedom and all the other values worth striving for. There are some wise sayings in this regard, i.e. “Words are like shots fired; you can apologise, but you cannot take them back”, or “Words are like sparrows; once they have flown, they cannot be recaptured”. Therefore, we must always be very careful choosing our words, whether it is in a group setting or on social media.

In the book, ‘If the Human Being Wants to Become Happy and Content...’ (Wenn der Mensch glücklich und zufrieden werden will ...), Billy explains that the thoughts and their feelings and the spoken words are an invisible might full of energies and powers that human beings constantly send out. The thoughts or the inner dialogues that are constantly running in our heads, form our feelings and words and we have to apply our intellect and rationality to not let them go out unbridled, because they create our outer circumstances. On page 3 Billy writes, “As a result, that which the human being sows today from his/her thoughts, feelings and words, he/she will reap as a result the very next day or otherwise in the future, because he/she is the creator of his/her own life.”

«Folgedem ergibt sich, dass das, was der Mensch heute aus seinen Gedanken, Gefühlen und Worten aussät, er schon am nächsten Tag oder sonstwie in der Zukunft als Ergebnis erntet, denn er ist der eigene Schöpfer seines Lebens.»

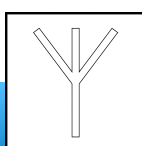

That means, if we have condemning thoughts or words and send them out, we will experience the effect already tomorrow or the day after or sometime in the future. However, not only our negative words that we send out via social media can be picked up by others, but likewise our negative thoughts can be picked up by another consciousness and consequently, similar words and thoughts can come back to us in a negative form.

As we know, meditation can help with many things, therefore also with overcoming the habit of having condemning or judging thoughts. Billy reminds us on page 3 of the above-mentioned book:

“Meditation allows human beings to recognise the power of the carousel of thoughts, feelings and words, as well as the possibility that they can free themselves from all their negative forms and turn towards the best, the good and the positive.”

«Die Meditation lässt den Menschen die Macht des Karussells der Gedanken, Gefühle und Worte erkennen, wie auch die Möglichkeit, dass er sich von all deren negativen Formen befreien und sich dem Besten, Guten und Positiven zuwenden kann.»

Personally, I am withdrawing more and more from social media, because not only can harmful words be shared without thinking or accidentally, but the written words cannot show tone or facial expression, which are so important in good and effective communication and which really help forming good interpersonal relationships, much better than electronic gadgets ever can.

WE MUST CARE FOR OUR EARTH BECAUSE WE WILL LIVE HERE FOR MILLIONS OF YEARS.

By Ian Lumsden

I used to believe in Christianity. I was living under the delusion and false expectation that the world was going to end soon and that Jesus was going to return in the final judgment. This insane belief made me think that it didn't matter what happened to our planet environmentally because I was going to heaven, and if the world was going to hell, then so what? What a crazy way to think. And sadly, I don't think I was alone in that attitude. Christianity, from my experience, is a very selfish belief system. It appeals to the greed in us.

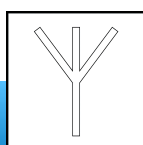

Many believers in religion do not realise that there is no God, no Satan, no heaven, no hell, and no Jesus Christ. As Dr. Joseph Campbell states in his book, The Power of Myth, "All the gods, all the heavens, all the hells are within us."

People often seek religion due to a fear of death and use it as a form of afterlife insurance. If only they would pay attention to what Semjase says in Contact 10, "this spirit within the human being is the bearer of the creational realm, and it is characteristic of all human beings. It is incomprehensible that the human being speaks of a heaven and of a kingdom of heaven in him- or herself and does not simply content with just saying: Creation, truth, knowledge, essence of wisdom, spirit, consciousness and existence. The human yearning lies in the joy that remains, in the immortal life, the lasting peace, the spiritual and consciousness-based richness that never passes and lasts eternally".

If more people understood that we have an everlasting existence through repeated incarnations on Earth, they might feel a greater responsibility for the condition of the planet we will leave for future generations. Even if your motivation is purely selfish, it's important to recognise the necessity of returning to a green, clean Earth where people live in love and harmony. This is essential for everyone's well-being.

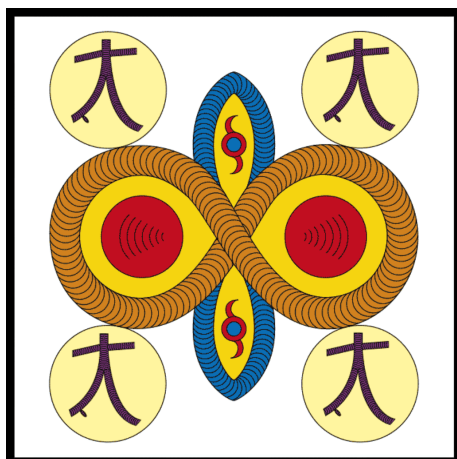

One thing that frustrates me about the people of Earth is that they talk a lot about a Green New Deal without addressing the underlying problem: overpopulation.

Stephen Hawking, in his speech to the White House Millennium Council in the year 2000, stated, "In the last two hundred years, population growth has become exponential. If the population continues to grow at the same percentage each year, which is currently about 1.9%, it may not seem significant, but it means that the world population doubles approximately every 40 years. By the year 2600, the world's population would be standing shoulder to shoulder, and electricity consumption could make the Earth glow red hot.”

A Green New Deal cannot be implemented without addressing the issue of population growth. I argue that one of the most effective ways to handle overpopulation and combat climate change is to educate women, particularly in developing countries.

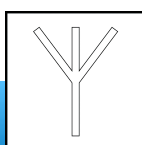

Overpopulation

In an article titled How Gender Equity Can Drive Sustainable Development, published on February 8, 2024, Professor Jen Verdun, the Pro Vice Chancellor of the College of Environmental and Life Sciences at Murdoch University, stated: “The most effective way to achieve fair environmental sustainability is through empowerment that comes from education. Educational and awareness programs centered on sustainable practices empower women to make informed choices regarding their environment, health, and the wellbeing of their communities.”

In her book, Teach the Women Well: Education Equality Is Key to Preventing Modern-Day Slavery of Women and Girls, Katharine A. Drummong emphasises that “studies have shown that prioritising the education of girls, particularly at the secondary school level, is crucial for breaking the cycle of poverty in developing countries. When girls receive an education, they can take on responsibilities outside their homes, pursue existing opportunities in business and their communities, or create their own opportunities. This not only allows them to contribute to the health and well-being of their families but also positively impacts their communities. Empowering girls in this way benefits not only the girls themselves but also the wider community.”

Katharine Drummong confronts the brutal and violent reality of sex trafficking of women. Sadly, for countless women in developing countries, there exists a similarly serious yet often unrecognised form of “soft” exploitation. The absence of education and opportunities forces many women to choose marriage as a necessary means of survival. This situation worsens the issue of overpopulation. Women who are empowered and educated tend to have fewer children. Japan is a contemporary example of this.

“The low fertility rate is partly a symptom of the advances Japanese women have made in recent years”, says Yuka Minagawa, an associate professor at Sophia University in Tokyo. “Better educational attainment and a rise in the number of women in the workplace mean they are marrying, and having children, significantly later than their mothers and grandmothers”

To create a better Earth for the future, we must prioritise the education and empowerment of women and girls.

Im Strom des Lebens und in seinem Rhythmus

Der Strom des Lebens ist ein Rhythmus, der in einen schöpferisch-natürlichen Zeitplan eingebunden ist, der von der Zeugung bis zum Tod dauert und mit dem der Mensch während seinem ganzen Leben untrennbar verbunden ist. In bezug auf diesen Zeitplan selbst kann der Mensch keine Kontrolle ausüben, doch hat er zeitlebens die Möglichkeit, die Geschwindigkeit der Entfaltung seines Wohls und seiner Glücklichkeit zu bestimmen und alles erfolgreich zu entfalten. Oder er hat gleichermassen die Möglichkeit, selbst die Schnelligkeit des Erschaffens seines Schadens und Unglücks herbeizuführen. Allein, in richtiger Weise hat jedoch alles gut und positiv auf die schöpferisch-natürlichen Gesetze und Gebote ausgerichtet zu werden, um in dieser Weise allein das Gute, Positive und das effective Wohl zur Entfaltung zu bringen. Dazu muss der Mensch die Geschwindigkeit dem Strom des Lebens und dessen Rhythmus angleichen, was bedeutet, dass er alles seiner Gedanken und Gefühle sowie seiner Handlungen, Taten und Verhaltensweisen auch seinem Vermögen

In the Stream of Life and in its Rhythm

The stream of life is a rhythm which is integrated into a creational-natural time plan, which lasts from conception until death and with which the human being is inextricably connected during his/her entire life. In regard to this time plan itself, the human being cannot exercise any control himself/herself, however he/she has the opportunity throughout his/her life to determine the speed of the unfolding of his/her wellbeing and happiness and unfold everything successfully. Or likewise he/she has the opportunity himself/herself to bring about the swiftness of the creation of his/her harm and unhappiness. However, in a right form nevertheless, everything has to be aligned in a good form and positively to the creational-natural laws and recommendations, in order to bring only the good, positive and the effective wellbeing into unfoldment in this form. For that to happen the human being must adapt the speed to the stream of life and its rhythm, which means that also he/she must adapt all his/her thoughts and feelings as well as his/her deeds, angleichen muss, und zwar je gemäss seinem Verstand und der Vernunft sowie der Geschwindigkeit, mit der sie zu arbeiten vermögen. So kommt es, dass sich alles langsamer oder schneller in der gewünschten Form zum Gedeihen und zum Wohl entwickelt und entfaltet, je nachdem, wie der Mensch die Geschwindigkeit der Entfaltung bestimmt und steuert. Niemals soll im Guten und Positiven jedoch etwas übereilt werden, denn es muss zugleich stets eine Bereitschaft wie auch Geduld gegeben sein, und zwar auch dafür, dass der Mensch sich darauf vorbereiten kann, alles, was er sich selbst erarbeitet, auch von sich selbst im richtigen Mass empfangen zu können, und zwar genau so, wie es sich im Strom des Lebens und in seinem Rhythmus ergibt. Nur in dieser Weise können die wahren Werte der schöpferisch-natürlichen Gesetze und Gebote durch den Menschen selbst wahrgenommen und im Leben umgesetzt werden, um wahre Liebe und Freundschaft zu erleben, wie auch um die eigene kreative Schöpferkraft in sich zu erfassen und auch Frieden, Freiheit und Harmonie sowie ein Glücklichein zum Wirken zu bringen. Und nur in diesem Sinn kann er allzeit darauf vertrauen, dass ihm im Strom des Lebens und in seinem Rhythmus – eingebunden im schöpferisch-natürlichen Zeitplan – immer wieder höchstes Wohl zufließt.

actions and modes of behaviour to his/her abilities, namely, according to his/her intellect and rationality as well as the speed with which they are able to work. It so happens that everything develops and unfolds more slowly or more quickly in the form wished for, for prosperity and for wellbeing, depending on how the human being determines and directs the speed of the unfoldment. However, nothing in that which good and positive should ever be rushed, because there must always be a willingness as well as patience at the same time, namely, so that the human being can prepare in the right measure to be able to receive everything he/she worked for, namely, exactly as it arises in the stream of life and in its rhythm. Only in this form can the true values of the creational-natural laws and recommendations be perceived by the human being himself/herself and implemented in life, in order to live and experience true love and friendship, as well as in order to grasp his/her own creative creator-power in himself/herself and also bring to work peace, freedom and harmony as well as a happiness. And only in this sense can he/she trust at all times that in the stream of life and in its rhythm – integrated into the creational-natural time plan – the highest wellbeing always flows to him/her.

Das Verstehen

Viele Menschen sind der falschen Ansicht, dass sie, weil sie überheblich gegen sich selbst sind, sehr schnell alles verstehen, doch sind es gerade diese, die in Wahrheit nie und nimmer etwas lernen.

The Understanding

Many human beings are of the wrong view that they, because they are boastful of themselves, very quickly understand everything, however, in truth it is precisely they who never ever learn anything.
